

A Free, Quick and Easy Way to Protest Government Spying

By Washington's Blog Global Research, June 15, 2013 Washington's Blog Region: USA Theme: Police State & Civil Rights

While it's obvious to everyone that the government is spying on virtually all of the digital communications of Americans – phone, email, Internet, credit card, etc. – the government is pretending that it only spies on foreigners and collecting our metadata (which can actually tell a lot about us).

Indeed, the government is instructing Senate staffers to stick cover their eyes and pretend that the spying documents found all over the Internet don't exist.

One free and easy way to protest mass surveillance, educate others, and yank Big Brother's chain is simply to add a sentence to the end of your emails and web posts.

To give you the idea: you've seen the disclaimers at the end of emails from lawyers, investment advisers, and similar professionals. You know, the ones that say stuff like "This is a confidential communication and can't be used by anyone but the intended recipient". They put the same disclaimer at the end of every single email.

Why don't we put our own disclaimer at the end of our emails, saying:

WARNING: The National Security Agency is likely recording and storing this communication as part of its unlawful spying programs on all Americans. Mass surveillance doesn't keep us safe, and even the top national security experts say that we don't need it. This communication – and any responses – can and will be used against the American people at any time in the future should folks in government decide to go after us for political reasons. And private information in digital communications may be given to big companies by the government.

Note: All modern browsers allow you to highlight, copy and the paste text with links in it into your email or web comment. If you prefer, you can copy just the text and delete the links.

The original source of this article is Washington's Blog Copyright © Washington's Blog, Washington's Blog, 2013

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca