

Assisted Suicide for Babies Demanded by Quebec College of Physicians

By Igor Chudov

Global Research, October 23, 2023

Igor's Newsletter 22 October 2023

Region: Canada

Theme: Law and Justice, Science and Medicine

All Global Research articles can be read in 51 languages by activating the Translate Website button below the author's name.

To receive Global Research's Daily Newsletter (selected articles), click here.

Click the share button above to email/forward this article to your friends and colleagues. Follow us on Instagram and Twitter and subscribe to our Telegram Channel. Feel free to repost and share widely Global Research articles.

I apologize for using the oxymoronic term "assisted suicide for babies" in the title. An infant is not self-aware and cannot "commit suicide." Infants want to live, eat, and be held by their parents. And yet, the Quebec College of Physicians wants to expand the Canadian "Medical Assistance in Dying" program to infants.

Watch Dr. Louis Roy, from the Quebec College of Physicians, telling the Commons' Special Joint Committee of Medical Assistance in Dying (MAID) on Oct. 7 that his organization believes MAID can be appropriate for infants up to age one who are born with "severe malformations."

Medical Assistance in Dying implies someone wanting to die and getting medical assistance to die in a socially approved manner with some comfort.

Infants under one year cannot possibly choose to die or request medical assistance, so the name does not exactly suit the situation. Instead of "assistance in dying," infants will be ethanized for the convenience of the parents and doctors who no longer want to deal with problematic babies. There are other, even more disturbing reasons for this program being promoted, which we will explore.

Canada's National Post has the details.

News / Canadian Politics

Quebec College of Physicians slammed for suggesting MAID for severely ill newborns

'Canada cannot begin killing babies when doctors predict there is no hope for them. Predictions are far too often based on discriminatory assumptions about life with a disability'

Catherine Lévesque

Published Oct 11, 2022 • 4 minute read

Source

Quebec's College of Physicians proposal attempts to sound sensible by referring to babies who suffer from "unbearable pain," with euthanasia approved by a doctor and consented to by both parents. I am unsure how custodial situations would be handled and suspect that "both parents' consent" would be disregarded in the case of non-married parents.

However, we must ask: how do we know that a baby's pain is unbearable? We cannot ask the baby, after all. As a father of two grown children, I remember them suffering from routine illnesses where their pain seemed "unbearable." My heart was breaking for them as they cried for hours over stomach pains and other issues, usually at night. While such pains felt desperately "unbearable" at the moment, they were temporary; fortunately, both kids grew up just fine. I learned that what seems unbearable in one moment may eventually become a distant memory.

The Quebec College of Physicians does not realize that and thinks adults can decide which infants to euthanize.

To read complete article click here

Note to readers: Please click the share button above. Follow us on Instagram and Twitter and subscribe to our Telegram Channel. Feel free to repost and share widely Global Research articles.

Featured image is from Children's Health Defense

The original source of this article is Igor's Newsletter

Copyright © Igor Chudov, Igor's Newsletter, 2023

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Igor Chudov

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca