

Charting the Cozy Connections between JP Morgan and the Senate Banking Committee

By Cora Currier

Global Research, June 14, 2012

ProPublica 14 June 2012

Region: USA

Theme: Global Economy

This morning, Jamie Dimon, the CEO of JP Morgan Chase, faced a Senate hearing [1] over more than \$2 billion in bank losses [2] caused by risky hedges that blew up. Dimon said [3] that the hedges—investments meant to protect the bank—had grown into “complex and hard-to manage risks.” The losses “let a lot of people down, and we are sorry for it.”

Many lawmakers are holding up the losses as evidence of the need for stronger financial regulation [4]. The chairman of the Senate banking committee, Tim Johnson, D-S.D., in his opening remarks, asked for “a full accounting” of JP Morgan’s losses.

googletag.display('google-callout');

But through campaign contributions and well-connected staff, JP Morgan appears to have already taken its own accounting of the Banking committee. Here’s a picture of connections between the company and the committee:

Revolving Door

One current staffer on the Senate banking committee, Dwight Fettig, is a former lobbyist for JP Morgan [5]. In 2009, the bank hired him to work on “financial services regulatory reform.” Meanwhile, JP Morgan is stacked thick with former committee staff.

- Naomi Camper – Currently a lobbyist for JP Morgan. Prior to that, from 2001-2004, she was an aide [6] to Senator Johnson.
- Kate Childress –A JP Morgan lobbyist since 2008 [7], she is also a former aide [8] to Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., who sits on both the Senate Banking and Finance committees.
- Steven Patterson –A JP Morgan lobbyist [9] and formerly a staff director [10] for economic policy for the Banking committee.
- Nate Gatten— A JP Morgan lobbyist based in London who was reportedly called back to Washington [11] recently to help with the company’s damage control. He is a former lobbyist for Fannie Mae, and, in the 1990s, was a banking aide [12] to former Senator Robert Bennett, R-Utah, who also sat on the committee.
- P. Michael Nielsen – A lobbyist with a firm run by former Senator Bennett, he has been retained by JP Morgan [13] for help with federal probes, according to Bloomberg. He was also a senior policy adviser [14] to the committee from 2007 to 2010.

American Banker also reported that three other [15] outside lobbyists currently working for JP Morgan were once affiliated with the committee:

- Jason Rosenberg – A lobbyist at The Glover Park Group and formerly an aide [16] to Jon Tester, D-Mont., who sits on the committee.

- Jenn Fogel-Bublick – A lobbyist at McBee Strategic Consulting and formerly a Democratic counsel [17] on the committee.

- Mike Chappell – A lobbyist for Fierce, Isakowitz & Blalock and a former press assistant [18] to Senator Roger Wicker, R-Miss., another committee member.

A former senator on the committee, Mel Martinez, R-Fl., is also now the JP Morgan exec in charge of Florida, Central America, and the Caribbean. Martinez was elected to the Senate in 2004 [19] and went to the bank in 2010. Bloomberg reported that he was called to Washington [11] after the losses were reported.

Lobbyists for JP Morgan appear to be keeping busy. The bank spent \$7.6 million on lobbying last year [20], according to the Center for Responsive Politics.

Campaign Contributions:

JP Morgan has also been a generous donor [21] to banking committee members, both Republican and Democratic.

- JP Morgan is the second largest campaign contributor to Johnson, the committee chair, and to the top Republican on the committee, Richard Shelby of Alabama, over the past twenty years [22], according to a tally from American Banker.

- JP Morgan employees have donated [23] more than $80,000 to Johnson since 1998 and more than $136,000 to Shelby since 1990.

- So far in 2012, Dimon has personally donated [24] to committee members Bob Corker, R-Tenn., and Mark Warner, D-Va. In 2008, he gave $2,000 each to Johnson and Shelby.

- Six of the 22 members of the banking committee have not received [21] any money from JP Morgan PACs or employees in recent election cycles. Two of those members are retiring and aren't collecting campaign funds.

It's not clear what the committee will do beyond the hearings. Numerous federal agencies are investigating JP Morgan's losses, including the Commodity Futures Trading Commission [25], the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency [26], the Department of Justice [27], and the Securities and Exchange Commission [28]. Next Tuesday, Dimon will testify in front of the House Committee on Financial Services.

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Cora Currier

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca