

Cover-up in Kandahar of “the Actions of a Group of US Soldiers”

By Joe Giambrone

Global Research, March 25, 2012

25 March 2012

Theme: Crimes against Humanity, Law and Justice, US NATO War Agenda

In-depth Report: AFGHANISTAN

“An Afghan elder who lives in Zangawat, a village near the base, said U.S. soldiers threatened residents with retaliation after an American vehicle hit a buried bomb three days before the shootings. “ (LA Times)

The massacre of 17 civilians in Panjwai, Kandahar is in high cover-up mode here in the United States. Even the roadside bombing which cost the leg of an as-yet unidentified US service member cannot be “confirmed” by the US military:

“A spokesman for the U.S. military declined to give any information on the bombing or even confirm that it occurred, citing the investigation of the shootings. He also declined to comment on the allegation that U.S. troops threatened retaliation.” (AP)

According to the massacre suspect, Sgt. Robert Bale’s lawyer, a fellow US service member lost a leg in that attack. What happened next was predictable, and it foreshadowed the massacre that would follow:

U.S. soldiers “took people out of their houses and threatened them,” Sayed Mohammad Azim Agha, the tribal elder, said in an interview. “They said, ‘If there are IEDs, you will bear the consequences’...” (LA Times)

If so, then this is a premeditated act of terrorism as well as mass-murder.

US media have finally looked into the situation in Panjwai, and seem to have started asking the right questions. Unfortunately, the Associated Press seems to have updated its own story over at the San Francisco Gate and subsequently omitted a number of troubling sentences from its report. San Franciscans may now learn that:

“Residents of an Afghan village near where an American soldier is alleged to have killed 16 civilians are convinced that the slayings were in retaliation for a roadside bomb attack on U.S. forces in the same area a few days earlier.” (SF Gate/AP)

Notice, it's now a matter of opinion, and that they are "convinced." This leaves wiggle room and turns it into a he-said/she-said story. However, the original AP story (Deb Riechmann) actually begins as follows:

"KANDAHAR, Afghanistan (AP) — Several Afghans near the villages where an American soldier is alleged to have killed 16 civilians say U.S. troops lined them up against a wall after a roadside bombing and told them that they, and even their children, would pay a price for the attack."

Further quotes substantiate these US/NATO threats against women and children just days before the killing spree, all of which are now deleted from the current SF Gate "Associated Press" version of this article. In Winston Smith 1984 fashion, all of this evidence is now tossed down the memory hole:

One Mokhoyan resident, Ahmad Shah Khan, told The Associated Press that after the bombing, U.S. soldiers and their Afghan army counterparts arrived in his village and made many of the male villagers stand against a wall.

"It looked like they were going to shoot us, and I was very afraid," Khan said. "Then a NATO soldier said through his translator that even our children will pay for this. Now they have done it and taken their revenge."

Neighbors of Khan gave similar accounts to the AP, and several Afghan officials, including Kandahar lawmaker Abdul Rahim Ayubi, said people in the two villages that were attacked told them the same story.

...Ghulam Rasool, a tribal elder from Panjwai district of Kandahar province, where the shootings occurred, gave an account of the bombing at a March 16 meeting in Kabul with President Hamid Karzai.

"After the incident, [the Americans] took the wreckage of their destroyed tank and their wounded people from the area," Rasool said. "After that, they came back to the village nearby the explosion site.

"The soldiers called all the people to come out of their houses and from the mosque," he said.

"The Americans told the villagers, 'A bomb exploded on our vehicle. ... We will get revenge for this incident by killing at least 20 of your people,'" Rasool said. "These are the reasons why we say they took their revenge by killing women and children in the villages." (AP, Reichmann)

The Afghan Parliament has determined that "15 to 20" Americans committed the murders, after a two day investigation in the villages. Afghan news reported:

"Witnesses told Reuters they saw a group of US soldiers arrive at their village in Kandahar's Panjwayi district at around 2am, enter homes and open fire."

"Haji Samad said 11 of his relatives were killed in one house, including his children... 'They (Americans) poured chemicals over their dead bodies and burned them.'"

A neighbor of the massacred family, Agha Lala, said, "They were all drunk and shooting all over the place... Their bodies were riddled with bullets." (Pajhwok Afghan News)

Even Salon and CNN report a hint of the cover-up and the actions of a group of US soldiers. In a CNN video an Afghan boy recounts:

"They took him my uncle out of the room and shot him," he says. "They came to this room and martyred all the children." (Salon)

Sgt. Bales appears to be the scapegoat who is now cooperating with the cover-up, presumably in exchange for a lighter sentence. Bale's lawyer now claims that Bales has no recollection at all of the killing spree, a convenient turn of events for those who wish to create the facts after the fact:

"[Bale's lawyer] Browne said Bales "has an early memory of that evening and he has a later memory of that, but he doesn't have memory of the evening in between."

Bales will remember whatever he is told to remember. Failure to do so could mean the death penalty.

Joe Giambrone is a filmmaker and author of Hell of a Deal: A Supernatural Satire. He edits The Political Film Blog, which welcomes submissions. polfilmblog at gmail. Joe Giambrone mail4joeg@hotmail.com

Notes

Villagers: Afghan slayings were act of retaliation, DEB RIECHMANN, Associated Press, March 21 2012

<http://www.google.com/hostednews/ap/article/ALeqM5gT-Bzfl4kmdAR-op8OIW0qzyM4ig?docId=82e3f4c45f9b4aa28084443d0cb35883>

Afghan villagers allege retaliation in shootings, Associated Press, Wednesday, March 21, 2012

<http://www.sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2012/03/20/MNNA1NNKRB.DTL>

Afghan shooting suspect didn't mention women, kids, official says, David S. Cloud and Laura King, Los Angeles Times, March 20, 2012, 7:27 p.m.

<http://www.latimes.com/news/nationworld/world/la-fg-afghanistan-shooter-20120321,0,4013858.story>

Up to 20 US troops executed Panjwai massacre: probe

by Bashir Ahmad Naadimon Mar 15, 2012, Pajhwok Afghan News,

<http://www.pajhwok.com/en/2012/03/15/20-us-troops-executed-panjwai-massacre-probe>

The rush to proclaim him “a lone nut” stumbles on official secrecy and conflicting evidence, Salon, Jefferson Morley, Wednesday, Mar 21, 2012

http://www.salon.com/2012/03/21/did_sgt_bales_have_help/singleton/

The original source of this article is Global Research
Copyright © Joe Giambrone, Global Research, 2012

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Joe Giambrone

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca