

Covering up the US-NATO Defeat: Afghan Government Bans Media Coverage of Taliban Attacks

Spy Agency to Decide Which Attacks Can Be Reported

By Jason Ditz

Global Research, March 03, 2010

Antiwar.com 1 March 2010

Theme: Intelligence, Media Disinformation

In-depth Report: AFGHANISTAN

Reports of violence in Afghanistan are poised to drop precipitously for the first time in years. It isn't as a result of the eternally optimistic NATO military occupation, rather, it is because the government has decided they're tired of seeing the reports.

Afghanistan's government has issued a decree today that journalists will no longer be allowed to cover attacks inside the nation. Reporting on the violence after the fact will be permitted at the sole discretion of the National Directorate of Security (NDS), the nation's spy agency.

"Live coverage does not benefit the government," warned NDS spokesman Saeed Ansari, who warned that journalists violating the new ban would be subject to arrest and their equipment seized. Media figures have cautioned that the move is a threat to free speech in the nation.

The Karzai government has been seen trying to consolidate its control over the nation, having just a week ago issued a decree seizing total control over the operation of future elections.

The original source of this article is Antiwar.com Copyright © Jason Ditz, Antiwar.com, 2010

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Jason Ditz

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca