

De-Dollarization: The Death Knell for US Hegemony?

By Ben Bartee

Global Research, April 07, 2023

Region: USA

Theme: Global Economy

All Global Research articles can be read in 51 languages by activating the Translate Website button below the author's name.

To receive Global Research's Daily Newsletter (selected articles), click here.

Click the share button above to email/forward this article to your friends and colleagues. Follow us on Instagram and Twitter and subscribe to our Telegram Channel. Feel free to repost and share widely Global Research articles.

Global Research Editor's Note

Will de-Dollarization be applied? National currencies are linked to the US dollar. This note pertains to Malaysia in response to the Epoch Times quotation.

Remember the 1997 Asian crisis whereby naked short selling in the currency markets was applied against South Korea, Indonesia, Thailand, with devastating economic and social consequences.

In 1997, Anwar Ibrahim, who was a protégé of the IMF and Wall Street was finance minister. Naked short selling against the ringit was on Wall Street's drawing board.

Anwar was their man in Kuala Lumpur under the government of Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad.

Anwar was removed from office. A carefully formulated plan was outlined and implemented under the Mahathir government to avoid the downfall of the ringit.

Anwar is a "dollarized Prime Minister" reporting to the Washington consensus.

A genuine de-dollarization agenda in Malaysia is unlikely to be adopted under Anwar.

Michel Chossudovsky, April 7, 2023

Already, 2023 has been a brutal year for US geopolitical hegemony — and it's not even halfway over.

An unprecedented wave of "de-dollarization" is sweeping the globe.

De-dollarization means countries which have used the US dollar for international trade since WWII are actively adopting alternatives, threatening to end to the US dollar's global reserve currency status.

As of April, the Malaysian government is the latest to signal its willingness to desert the dollar, following in the footsteps of other vital national economies.

Via Epoch Times:

“Malaysia no longer believes it's necessary to depend on the U.S. dollar, Prime Minister Anwar Ibrahim said during an address to the nation's parliament...

“‘When I had a meeting with President Xi Jinping,’ he immediately said, ‘I refer to Anwar's proposal on the Asian Monetary Fund, and he welcomed discussions,’ Anwar told lawmakers on April 4. ‘There is no reason for Malaysia to continue depending on the dollar.’”

A brief summary of some of the most important de-dollarization developments throughout the world economy:

- Malaysia is ditching the dollar
- Ghana \(and other oil-producing countries\) are now selling oil in gold instead of dollars
- France - the United States' oldest ally - is now trading with China in yuan
- China and Brazil are now trading in each other's currencies
- India and Malaysia are currently using the Indian rupee for trade
- China is now purchasing natural gas from the United Arab Emirates in yuan
- BRICS (the economic alliance of Brazil, Russia, India, China, and South Africa) is reportedly developing its own currency

All of this is exceedingly relevant because, for decades, the US has used its currency as a tool for geopolitical domination. Via European Conservative:

“Almost surely the principal factor driving countries to move away from the current global financial system, which has been in place since the end of World War II, is the U.S. government's ability—and ever-increasing willingness to—weaponize the dollar against its political adversaries and those who refuse to go along with its political program.”

Just a year ago, abandoning the dollar would have been considered national suicide by most policymakers. But a Eurasian war over a relatively obscure piece of geography, of all things, paved the way for a whole new paradigm.

Via NPR, February 2022:

“The U.S., Canada and European allies are moving to cut off certain Russian banks from the SWIFT bank messaging system as part of a dramatic new round of sanctions meant to punish Russia for the ongoing invasion of Ukraine.

The White House issued a statement saying, in part, ‘we commit to ensuring that selected Russian banks are removed from the SWIFT messaging system. This will ensure that these banks are disconnected from the international financial system and harm their ability to operate globally.”

Russia was then forced to develop alternative economic arrangements – after all, “necessity is the mother of invention.” It did just that, setting the precedent for the cascade of countries now rethinking their subordinate economic position vis a vis the United States.

Assuming maintaining US hegemony is still the goal (it may not be), the multinational corporate state in charge of the West made a huge miscalculation when it cut Russia out of the international banking system.

What does de-dollarization mean for war and peace? If historical precedent is any reliable indicator, the answer is “nothing good.” Consider, for instance, that the United States launched a bloody coup against Libyan President Moammar Gaddafi for the crime of attempting to establish a pan-African currency to replace the dollar.

Neoliberal four-star general Hillary Clinton, upon learning of his death, laughed maniacally into the camera.

“We came. We saw. He died.”- Hillary Clinton <https://t.co/Drfrr1XDexpic.twitter.com/LZBh2FKBPK>

— Roshi Kokura (@RoshiRasoo) March 12, 2023

All that to say: to start a war over economics is nothing to these people.

The architects of the US war machine understand well that their military primacy is inexorably dependent on American economic primacy. If the latter falls, so goes the former.

Geopolitical realignments of the sort currently underway rarely occur peacefully – the only notable exception in recent history being the relatively bloodless dissolution of the Soviet Union in the early 90s.

All signs point to war.

*

Note to readers: Please click the share button above. Follow us on Instagram and Twitter and subscribe to our Telegram Channel. Feel free to repost and share widely Global Research articles.

This article was originally published on The Daily Bell.

Ben Bartee is an independent Bangkok-based American journalist with opposable thumbs. He is a regular contributor to Global Research.

Featured image is from TDB

The original source of this article is Global Research
Copyright © Ben Bartee, Global Research, 2023

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Ben Bartee

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca