

Democratic Caucus in New Senate Will Have Between 53 and 63 Members

By Andrew First

Global Research, October 30, 2008

After Downing Street 30 October 2008

Region: USA

Theme: Law and Justice

The new Senate in the 111th Congress may have a Democratic caucus that can no longer blame anything at all on Republican filibusters. It takes 60 votes to break a filibuster, and the Democrats are very likely to hold between 53 and 61 seats, plus 2 seats belonging to independents who have caucused with the Democrats in the past, for a potential total of 63. Republicans will hold between 37 and 45 seats, and — because even the smallest states have two U.S. senators each, just like the largest — Republicans will represent a much smaller percentage of the U.S. population than those numbers suggest.

Andrew First has drawn up a very useful summary of the current makeup of the Senate and the polling in each race. For further details see:

<http://afterdowningstreet.org/sites/afterdowningstreet.org/files/2008senate.pdf>

The original source of this article is After Downing Street

Copyright © Andrew First, After Downing Street, 2008

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Andrew First

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca