Introduction to the topic

The members of the European Union are doing a “good job” and do not want to leave anything to chance. Other organisations like the WHO are joining in.

After it was recently announced that the Digital Service Act (DSA) for very large platforms and search engines has come into force, which is supposed to limit the power of internet monopolists and expand possibilities of political censorship (1), the well-known German business journalist Dr. Norbert Häring has now reported on his blog that the EU project “Jitsuvax” will be funded with 3.1 million euros over a period of four years to develop psychological methods to combat vaccination scepticism (2). The article titled “Jitsuvax: Psychological martial arts against people sceptical about mRNA vaccines” has meanwhile also appeared on the independent internet platform “apolut” as a viewpoint (3).

Häring's assessment of the project sounds like this:

“‘Scientists’ who let themselves be paid by the government to develop lazy psychological tricks with which the government can manipulate citizens are a disgrace to science. They do great harm to democracy.” (4)

Personally, in light of the two shock experiences, I think not only of science and democracy, but also of the myriad research findings and articles on international Corona politics and the mostly fatal Covid vaccinations. Among others, I think of the dedicated contributions of the Canadian economics professor Michel Chossudovsky, editor and director of the “Centre for Research on Globalization” and operator of the website “gloabelresearch.ca”, as well as the new EU regulation that will characterise and punish honest enlightenment as wanton and harmful disinformation in the near future.

EU Project of the University of Bristol

For two years, the University of Bristol has been leading an EU project that develops psychological methods to overcome vaccination refusal. Cornelia Betsch, a psychologist and professor of health communication, heads the German section of the five-country project called "Jitsuvax".

For the publicist Häring, the whole project is questionable because people who are sceptical about experimental mRNA vaccinations are treated as opponents and accused of having base motives and unfair means. The method used is psychological manipulation.

These "manipulation scientists", according to Häring, identify eleven problematic personality traits in vaccination sceptics on which vaccination scepticism is based; among others: Conspiracy belief, distrust of authority, religious attitude and insistence on autonomy. For them, only psychological defects exist as reasons for vaccination scepticism. Legitimate factual reasons for the rejection of vaccination have not been described by these so-called researchers (5).

On the content of the project, Häring writes literally:

"It researches and disseminates psychological tricks for doctors to use to overcome vaccination reluctance."(6)

Proposal of Compulsory Vaccination to Pacify Society

Dated 15.11. 2022, Häring writes in his blog:

"Pro-government 'scientists' are seriously proposing compulsory vaccination to pacify society.

Compulsory vaccination would help to reduce the polarisation of society, write five German social scientists in an essay in the journal Nature Human Behaviour. How do they arrive at this? It has nothing to do with science, but a lot to do with bias, tricks and academic detachment from life."

Häring gives an example:

"So if someone comes to the conclusion not to have their own child vaccinated against Covid because it has turned out that the vaccination does not help against infection and transmission, and because the risk of serious side effects at least for children is greater than the risk of serious health damage from Covid, then one of the eleven mental defects must be identified as the cause. Because the possibility that the authorities made a mistake and the vaccination recommendation for children and infants was wrong is excluded. For the manipulation scientists, truth is a flexible thing that always depends on what the authorities are saying at the moment." (7)

Other Renowned Organisations Join Ominous Plans

Under the headline "WHO members pass resolution to manipulate public opinion", Häring writes on his blog dated 31/05/2023:

"At the World Health Assembly in Geneva, member states passed a resolution calling on all governments and the World Health Organization (WHO) to make greater and more systematic use of behavioural science to counter ‘health misinformation and disinformation’ and ensure demand for vaccines.” (8)

On 31/01/2023, Häring writes to the headline “WHO advises governments that have used up all trust to hire surreptitious vaccinators”:

“In a WHO-recommended article in Foreign Affairs, health scientists and officials advise rulers who are no longer trusted by large segments of the populations to ‘invest’ in trusted institutions and individuals to promote pandemic measures.” (9)

Science Education as Disinformation: Brave New World!

Should valuable scientific education be characterised and punished as harmful disinformation in the near future and Covid vaccine sceptics discredited as mentally ill, Aldous Huxley’s Brave New World sends his regards!

The Worldwide Corona Crisis, Global Coup d'Etat Against Humanity

by Michel Chossudovsky

Michel Chossudovsky reviews in detail how this insidious project “destroys people’s lives”. He provides a comprehensive analysis of everything you need to know about the “pandemic” — from the medical dimensions to the economic and social repercussions, political underpinnings, and mental and psychological impacts.

“My objective as an author is to inform people worldwide and refute the official narrative which has been used as a justification to destabilize the economic and social fabric of entire countries, followed by the imposition of the “deadly” COVID-19 “vaccine”. This crisis affects humanity in its entirety: almost 8 billion people. We stand in solidarity with our fellow human beings and our children worldwide. Truth is a powerful instrument.”
