Details regarding today's reports of a Turkish Jet which lost contact with air traffic control over Syrian airspace and crashed into Syrian territorial waters, are still unclear.

It is not known whether the jet was shot down or not.

According RT, Turkish President Erdogan "did not confirm reports that Damascus had apologized for shooting down the plane". Turkey has so far refrained from giving any information the two pilots, who are said to have been rescued earlier. More information is expected to be released after a security meeting scheduled for this evening.

If the West and NATO is to enforce a Libya-style 'no fly-zone' in Syria, then Turkey would be the tool of choice to run such an operation. In addition, the Syrian Air Force is considering bombing raids as part of their fight against insurgents and al-Qaida terrorists north of Aleppo - who have been using Turkey as refuge from the Syrian Army.

Syrian National Council representative Bassma Kodmani was in attendance at this year's Bilderberg Meeting in Chantilly, VA, another indication that the West's plans for Syrian regime change and later balkanization - have already been signed off. Kodmani is the Head of Foreign Affairs with the SNC, a coalition of Syrian opposition groups based in Istanbul, Turkey. Clearly, an external agenda is set regarding the destiny of that country.
