

Egypt's Mursi Defends Power Grab

Insists Move 'Temporary' and Aimed to Protect Constitutional Committee

By Jason Ditz

Global Research, November 26, 2012

Antiwar.com 25 November 2012

Region: Middle East & North Africa

Theme: Police State & Civil Rights

In-depth Report: ARAB PROTEST MOVEMENT

Faced with an ever-growing backlash over last week's power grab, Egyptian President Mohamed Mursi struggled to defend his edict, insisting that the move was "temporary" and not intended to centralize power in his hands.

Rather, in a new statement Mursi insisted that the move was meant to limit the power of the judiciary, and was primarily aimed at avoiding the "politicization" of the court system while keeping them from ousting the committee penning the new constitution.

Yet the edict went well beyond protecting the committee, claiming unilateral power for the president to do anything he deems necessary and insisting the court can't even theoretically review anything he does. To the extent it renders the court totally powerless it would seem to limit interest in its politicization.

Making the move temporary does seem to be a key part of the edict, and assuming it remains temporary it may placate some critics. The edict only sought to define presidential power until the new constitution is written, with the assumption that the constitution itself will define them afterwards.

"Temporary" measures in the Middle East have a tendency to last for decades, however, as with the "emergency law" in place in Egypt before the revolution, which granted Mursi's predecessor Hosni Mubarak similar unchecked power. The longer it takes to get a constitution in place, the more Egyptians are likely to bristle at the power Mursi is now claiming for himself.

The original source of this article is Antiwar.com

Copyright © [Jason Ditz](http://Jason Ditz), Antiwar.com, 2012

---

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Jason Ditz

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca

www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca