Wednesday, March 11 - John Bellamy Foster

Thursday, March 12 - Jamilla El-Shafei

Friday, March 13 – Monday’s program repeated

Time: 10AM US Central time

Ellen Brown is a civil litigation attorney, author, and frequent writer on financial topics. Her latest book is titled “Web of Debt.” In it, she analyzed the private cartel Federal Reserve and how it usurped money creation power to control its supply and price, then charge the government interest on its own money.

Brown writes often on the global economic crisis. Discussion will focus on that topic as well as the Obama administration’s bailout and stimulus plans.

Peter Phillips is a Sonoma State University Sociology Professor and Director of Project Censored (PC), the media democracy advocacy group. It researches and publishes vital news stories that are “underreported, ignored, misrepresented, or censored by the US corporate media.”

Discussion will focus on the latest from PC, Phillips’ recent articles, and current major world topics.

John Bellamy Foster is Editor of Monthly Review and Professor of Sociology at the University of Oregon where he combines research on capitalism’s economic, political and ecological contradictions with teaching sociology, social theory, Marxism, and political economy.

He’s also written many articles and authored numerous books, including his latest: The Great Financial Crisis – Causes and Consequences.

The crisis and his book will be discussed.

Jamilla El-Shafei is an artist and longtime social justice and environmental activist and organizer. In June 2008, she founded Save Our Water to mobilize citizen opposition to the Nestle Corporation’s proposed expropriation of the Kennebunkport, Maine’s Wells Water District groundwater.

She mounted a successful campaign to table Nestle’s proposal indefinitely, and recently the town of Shapleigh passed a Rights-Based Ordinance stripping corporations of their personhood and restoring local power to the community.

These issues will be discussed on the program.
