

Everyone Gets Cosmetic Procedures, Says Time—and by “Everyone,” They Mean Almost No One

By Jim Naureckas

Global Research, July 01, 2015

FAIR 30 June 2015

Region: USA

Theme: Science and Medicine

“Now everyone gets work done. Will you?” reads the front-page teaser for Joel Stein’s piece about plastic surgery, “Nip. Tuck. Or Else. Why You’ll Be Getting Cosmetic Procedures Even if You Don’t Really Want To,” in the June 29, 2015, edition of Time.

The bandwagon effect continues inside: “Not having work done is now the new shame,” Stein writes. “Cosmetic surgery has become the new makeup.” He quotes a young-adult novelist: “This is the first generation that thinks about plastic surgery as almost a given.”

Stein’s article concludes: “All of our friends are going to have to keep up with us. And then all of their friends, until everyone is getting every procedure they possibly can.”

Even by the standards of newsweekly hyperbole, this is ridiculous. In the piece, Stein writes that “in the US, doctors performed over 15 million cosmetic procedures in 2014, a 13 percent increase from 2011 and more than twice as many as in 2000.”

The population of the United States is now 319 million, so 15 million is about 5 percent per capita.

Even that overstates how big “everyone” is, since most of those procedures are injections like Botox—a muscle relaxant that has to be readministered as often as four times a year. Coupled with the fact that Botox can be used on multiple parts of the body—each of which may be considered a different “procedure”—the “everyone” who “gets work done” turns out to be a tiny fraction of the population.

When you go beyond injections to actual cosmetic surgery—the “new makeup,” according to Stein—the numbers are even more minuscule. “There were 1.7 million plastic surgeries in the US in 2014,” a graphic accompanying the article notes—about 1 for every 200 Americans, in other words. And that’s down 12 percent from 2000, according to a study by the American Society of Plastic Surgeons—contrary to Stein’s portrait of a society hurtling toward a brave new world where everyone gets every cosmetic intervention imaginable.

Jim Naureckas is the editor of FAIR.org. Research assistance: Michael Tkaczewski.

Messages to Time can be sent to letters@time.com (or via Twitter: @TIME). Please remember that respectful communication is the most effective.

The original source of this article is FAIR

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Jim Naureckas

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca