To say that the public has become disillusioned and wary of constant doomsday media reports and news coverage that adhere to corporate agendas is a gross understatement — people see their world changing and they want to understand what is happening, and why. They want to be informed and therefore be prepared. They want the freedom to make educated choices instead of being told what to do by the very individuals and institutions that have led them into chaos.

In the face of mainstream media disinformation, Global Research has remained independent and continues to deliver vital and timely information, and we are grateful for the input of our editors, contributors, staff and volunteers in helping to carry out this task. Our reader feedback has been an invaluable source of encouragement, motivation and growth.

Nonetheless, curbing the tide of disinformation being pumped out by powerful and well-funded mainstream media is a considerable challenge. Global Research operates on a shoestring budget and does not accept funding from outside sources, and is thus able to maintain its independence. However, we would not be able to do this without the financial contributions of our readers, and to continue our efforts we need your support. In the words of journalist Eric Walberg:

“Since 9/11, Global Research has been one of the best sources of news and analysis of the growing political, economic and social crisis the world is facing. As the mainstream western media becomes more and more embedded with the forces of empire, Global Research continues to explore different ways of understanding the complex world system. A contribution to this essential forum is a contribution to a brighter future for us all.”
