

International Travel to Banned Muslim Countries: US Immigration Halts Former Prime Minister of Norway at Airport

By Nina Berglund

Global Research, February 03, 2017

News in English 2 February 2017

Region: USA

Theme: Police State & Civil Rights

Former Prime Minister Kjell Magne Bondevik, photographed here after attending the Nobel Peace Prize ceremony in Oslo in December, was stopped by US immigration officials when he landed in the US on Wednesday. They questioned him for an hour about a stamp in his diplomatic passport showing that he'd been in Iran. PHOTO: NRK screen grab

Norway's national commercial television channel TV2 reported Thursday night that Bondevik had traveled to the US to attend the annual prayer breakfast involving various religions that's traditionally held after the inauguration of a new US president. Bondevik is an ordained minister and former leader of the Christian Democrats party, and has served both as Norway's foreign minister and prime minister.

He told TV2 he was stopped at the airport's border control and questioned for around an hour.

"They began to ask me why I had been in Iran and what I was going to do in the US," Bondevik told TV2. "They shouldn't have had any reason to fear a former prime minister who has been on official visits to the US several times."

Bondevik wound up a target, however, of the new ban ordered by US President Donald Trump on entry into the US for all citizens of Iran, Iraq, Syria, Yemen, Sudan, Somalia and Libya. All refugees have also been banned from entering the US for the next four months, while Syrian citizens and refugees have been banned indefinitely.

As a former prime minister, Bondevik remains entitled to a diplomatic passport. That didn't stop the US border agents from placing him under suspicion. Bondevik said he had also traveled to the US with the same passport containing the same stamp from Iran last year without being stopped or questioned.

"It seems as though when the name of one of the banned countries comes up, they now put up the barbed wire," Bondevik said. "It was entirely unnecessary suspicion. I became quite provoked."

Bondevik, who has worked for years on peace and reconciliation efforts around the world, said he can understand the fear of terror, "but you shouldn't treat entire groups of people in this manner. I have to admit I fear the future (with Trump as president). There's been a lot of progress in the world the last few decades, but this gives great cause for concern, along with the authoritarian leaders we see steering other large countries."

The original source of this article is News in English
Copyright © Nina Berglund, News in English, 2017

---

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Nina Berglund

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca

www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca