Since Hillary Clinton announced without any surprise that she was running for president, it is worth taking a look at her record. As U.S. Secretary of State during the conflict between Russia and Georgia, Clinton claimed that the U.S. was committed to "Georgia's sovereignty and territorial integrity," and that the "United States does not recognize spheres of influence."

In the meantime she was pushing for the military integration of countries from the former Soviet Union with NATO. Rick Rozoff commented at the time: "Despite Clinton's claim to the contrary, the United States most decidedly recognizes spheres of influence. In its own hemisphere - the entirety of it - in the South Caucasus and everywhere else on the planet."

Also in the double standard category, Washington is applying sanctions on Iran for its non-existent nuclear weapons, even though the Pentagon has "officially" recognized that Israel is a nuclear power. More on these topics and other important issues below.
