There can be no denying it: these are exciting times and changes are unfolding at unprecedented rates. Few can claim not to have some knowledge of the widespread protests that have been rocking Tunisia and Egypt this past month, and indeed the word “revolution” is on many people’s lips.

We are witnessing large-scale unrest, entire populations who refuse to be exploited and continue living in poverty at the hands of a small ruling elite, manipulated by foreign interests, who prosper while their nations flounder.

Does this pattern sound familiar? This, in fact, describes the undercurrents of populations not just in faraway countries; the spirit of resistance is bubbling up in our own backyards and across neighbouring borders.

Here at Global Research, our correspondents and volunteers are devoting a great deal of time and energy into covering and analyzing the news as it happens. We are exceedingly grateful for their efforts and excited to convey their research through our websites, to ensure it reaches as many readers as possible.

We know that many of you have been forwarding our articles, posting them to blogs, linking up through Facebook and Twitter and using various means at your disposal to share this timely and critical information, and we sincerely thank you for that and encourage you to increase your efforts. Change is coming and it is crucial that we stay “in the know”, now more than ever.
