What is featured below are the first three paragraphs of the Daily Mail article.

A medical board in Maine has suspended the license of an MIT-educated doctor and ordered a psychiatric evaluation after she was accused of treating some of her patients with Ivermectin and Hydroxychloroquine and spreading misinformation about COVID-19.

Maine’s Board of Licensure in Medicine voted last week to conduct a deeper investigation into Dr Meryl Nass, from Ellsworth. The board also voted to suspend her license for 30 days and have her undergo a psychiatric evaluation.

The board stated in its January 12 order that allowing Nass to continue practicing medicine

'constitutes an immediate jeopardy to the health and physical safety of the public who might receive her medical services.'

Nass, 70, is an internist who is active in Children's Health Defense, a group that agitates against vaccines and vaccine mandates.
