US-dominated NATO threatens world peace. It's for offense, not defense. No threats exist except invented ones, lamely justifying the unjustifiable. Washington uses the alliance to advance its imperium, hanging a sword of Damocles over humanity.

Claiming NATO's resolve is to confront a "resurgent Russia" masks its aim to be a world policeman, a global alliance operating on every continent, an enforcer of US foreign policy - an agenda of endless wars, elimination of all independent governments, puppet regimes replacing them, planet earth colonized.

Obama's Financial Times op-ed on the summit's eve combined anti-Russia saber-rattling with willful deception.

"This may be the most important moment for our transatlantic alliance since the end of the cold war," he said.

Claiming terrorist threats ignored US responsibility for creating ISIS and likeminded groups, using them as imperial foot soldiers in the Middle East, Central Asia, Africa and elsewhere.

Citing the refugee crisis failed to explain America's responsibility for the gravest one since WW II. Accusing Russia of "aggression against Ukraine threat(ing) our vision of a Europe that is whole, free and at peace" turned truth on its head.

Saying "(w)e need to bolster the defense of our allies in central and eastern Europe, strengthen deterrence and boost our resilience against new threats" begs the question.

Why when invented threats alone exist, America and its rogue allies the only real ones, NATO belligerently serving their interests, its agenda humanity's greatest scourge.

Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg is a US-appointed front man representing its imperial interests.

At Warsaw's summit saying "NATO...send(s) a very clear message that we are here" is code language reflecting aggressive US foreign policy - Russia and China its prime targets, creating the illusion of both countries posing a threat to alliance members when none exists.

Putin spokesman Dmitry Peskov urged "common sense" over "anti-Russia hysteria," explaining it's "absurd to speak of a (nonexistent) threat coming from Russia when people are being killed in the heart of Europe, while hundreds die in the Middle East every day."

Days earlier, Putin said "(w)e are always accused of some kind of military activity. Where?

On our (own) territory. But (deploying NATO combat troops and heavy weapons) on our border - that's OK."

According to Russian upper house Federation Council Foreign Policy Committee chairman Konstantin Kosachov, "(t)he Warsaw summit is a summit of deception...cement(ing) a second wall in Europe after the Berlin one...proceed(ing) from the logic of confrontation..."

Russian Federation Council first deputy Defense and Security committee head Frants Klintsevich called deploying battalions of combat troops near Russia's border an "act of aggression...hav(ing) an extremely negative impact on the global situation on the whole."

Russia will respond appropriately, he added, responsibly protecting its national security interests. Belligerent US-led actions belie Stoltenberg saying NATO doesn't want a new Cold War, arms race, confrontation or Russia isolated.

Its agenda risks global war for the first time since WW II ended - today's super-weapons able to end life on earth.
