With an annual salary of $172,000 ($223,000 when she’s speaker of the House), Pelosi is worth an estimated $120-\$315 million. The perfect person to preach against corruption.

Regarding the “peace” award from NATO – the equivalent of receiving a child protection award from Jeffrey Epstein – Pelosi has enthusiastically supported every war since she entered Congress in 1987.

In her remarks, Nancy Pelosi considered that “women are champions in the fight against corruption,” which is equivalent to “strengthening democracy.”

Stressing that “NATO is not just a security alliance, but “an alliance of values” she warned of the danger of autocratic regimes that “challenge democracy” as well as corruption that often accompanies these regimens.
