

New mass protest against government, US beef in South Korea

By Global Research

Region: Asia

Global Research, July 06, 2008

AFP 5 July 2008

SEOUL (AFP) — Tens of thousands of South Koreans marched through the streets here Saturday demanding the scrapping of US beef imports and the resignation of President Lee Myung-Bak, witnesses said.

Waving flags and banners, the thronging crowd slowly snaked through the city centre chanting “Lee Myung-Bak out!,” but there was none of the violent clashes with police that have broken out at some previous recent demonstrations.

Scores of religious leaders including Catholic nuns and Protestant pastors led the march, holding a large banner in front of them, in a calculated move by organisers to prevent hostilities with the thousands of riot police.

Police said the crowd numbered 50,000 but organisers put their estimate ten times higher.

The march followed a mass rally near the City Hall in central Seoul, which was sealed off completely with barricades of police buses, parked tightly and manned by riot police with shields.

Passers-by and vehicles were turned away from the area.

The demonstrations, going back two months, were sparked by Seoul’s agreement in April to resume US beef imports, which were halted in 2003 after a US mad cow disease case.

As Lee’s government struggles to ratify a free-trade pact with the US and in response to the protests, Seoul went back to Washington to negotiate extra health safeguards, and the meat is now on sale.

“Aside from the beef issue, this government fills me with disgust,” a 32-year-old protester who works as a computer programmer told AFP.

“This government has lost public confidence, betrayed people’s expectation for economic turnaround and worsened education problems,” he said as his two young nephews in prams were playing with yellow protest balloons.

The crowd grew as more and more groups arrived after the rain stopped, although generally the number at protests has fallen sharply since 100,000 people gathered in Seoul on June 10, according to police estimates.

An umbrella grouping of activists, the People’s Association for Measures against Mad Cow Disease, said hundreds of people, including young Christians, would serve as “human shields” to separate the protesters from riot police.

“In order to prevent any violent clashes with riot police, religious leaders, leading activists and parliament members will lead the march,” it said in a statement.

Protesters have previously clashed with police, with more than 200 people hurt in running battles last Sunday.

Supporters of the newly installed conservative government say left-wing professional agitators have been taking over some rallies, a charge denied by the protest groups.

Analysts say beef is not the only source of public dissatisfaction. Policy failures due to inexperience, economic woes deepened by high oil prices and Lee’s alleged authoritarian style have also stoked resentment, they say.

Lee has twice apologised to the nation for his handling of the issue and sacked top aides, but says rallies should now stop.

The original source of this article is AFP
Copyright © Global Research, AFP, 2008

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Global Research

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca