

Phony Scare Tactics? Would a Pre-Election Homeland Terrorist Attack Help or Hurt Hillary?

America hasn't experienced a terrorist attack in modern memory. Innocent patsies were wrongfully blamed for officially announced ones, and others allegedly foiled - 9/11 the mother of all false flags.

Would Hillary or Trump benefit from a pre-election incident, proclaimed a terrorist attack? CBS News cited unnamed sources, saying "US intelligence has alerted joint terrorism task forces (about) al Qaeda (perhaps) planning attacks in three states (believed to be New York, Texas and Virginia) for" November 7 - the day before US elections.

According to an unnamed senior FBI official, "(t)he counterterrorism and homeland security communities remain vigilant and well-postured to defend against attacks here in the United States."

The FBI, working with our federal, state and local counterparts, shares and assesses intelligence on a daily basis and will continue to work closely with law enforcement and intelligence community partners to identify and disrupt any potential threat to public safety.

Fact: Al Qaeda is a US creation, supported in Syria and other countries where its fighters are deployed - unlikely to bite the hand feeding it.

CBS reported phony scare-tactic information supplied by Washington sources. If an incident occurs, it'll be state-sponsored, an American tradition.

In the wake of last June's Orlando false flag, followed by incidents in New York, New Jersey and Minnesota, Trump blamed Obama, saying:

"We've been weak. Our country's been weak. We're letting people in by the thousands, the tens of thousands. I've been saying we've gotta stop it. Hillary Clinton wants to increase" the refugee numbers Obama let in.

Hillary said

"I'm the only candidate in this race who's been part of the hard decisions to take terrorists off the battlefield. The kinds of rhetoric and language that Mr. Trump has used is giving aid and comfort to our adversaries."

So who'll benefit or be disadvantaged by a pre-election false flag [alleged threat or actual event] hours before polls open?

Neither most likely, unless power brokers, at the 11th hour, decided they erred in choosing Hillary, cut a deal with Trump assuring he'll support their agenda, and intend anointing him Obama's successor by electoral-rigging if necessary.

It's unlikely to go this way. But given America's deplorable state, anything is possible with an important reminder. So-called US democracy serves its privileged few alone.

No matter who holds top executive, congressional and judicial posts, the dirty system continues - each administration and its supporting caste exceeding the ruthlessness of its predecessors since the neoliberal 90s during the two-term Bill and Hillary co-presidency, America's most notorious crime family.
