The UK is 'too deep' in the Ukraine war, Russia's ambassador warned - while insisting that Putin will not use nuclear weapons in an attack despite a series of thinly veiled threats.

Diplomat Andrei Kelin alleges he has evidence of UK special forces' participation in a Ukrainian drone attack on Russia's Black Sea fleet, which he claims to have passed on to his UK counterpart.

Speaking to Sky News' Mark Austin, Mr Kelin said:

'We perfectly know about the participation of British specialists in [the] training, preparation and execution of violence against the Russian infrastructure and the Russian fleet in the Black Sea. We know that it has been done.'

Mr Kelin told media that the evidence will be made public 'pretty soon'.

He said:

'It is dangerous because it escalates the situation. It can bring us up to the line of... I won't say "no return", because return is always possible. But anyway, we should avoid escalation.

'And this is a warning actually that Britain is too deep in this conflict. It means the situation is becoming more and more dangerous.'
