Award winning journalist Julian Assange and Stella Morris married at Belmarsh prison today with four guests and two witnesses in attendance.

In a joint statement Julian and Stella called on ordinary people everywhere to continue the fight against his extradition to the United States:

“This wedding is more than just your average tying of the knot. This is a powerful statement to the world that love transcends all bounds, even those of powerful states bent on revenge and corrupt self-interest. Support our fight for freedom, for truth, and for love. Help us get Julian back to his family. It is only by standing together, that we can stand at all.”

Below is a picture of Stella Morris, her children and Julian’s brother Gabriel on the way to the prison for the wedding ceremony.

WikiLeaks has pointed out that, “No pictures of Julian Assange from today are available as prison authorities deemed images of the groom a ‘security risk’.”

On the same day as the wedding the National Union of Journalists has renewed its call for the British government to halt Assange’s extradition to the United States where he would be kept in inhumane conditions.

The NUJ has renewed its call for UK government intervention in Assange's case.

The UK Supreme Court's decision to deny Julian Assange the right to appeal his extradition to the US, is a new blow to free expression. Commenting on the ruling, Michelle Stanistreet, NUJ general secretary said:

“The legal shortcomings in the case to extradite Julian Assange are clear, as are the risks to free speech from this attempted prosecution. This comes against a backdrop of legal threats to reporting among them the production order sought against Chris Mullin, proposed reforms of the Official Secrets Act and plans to scrap the Human Rights Act.

“The Home Secretary should call a halt to this extradition attempt and affirm the government’s support for a free media.”

I will leave the last words on Julian’s case to his wife Stella:

“Julian is not charged with a crime in the UK. The charges he faces in the United States are, according to Amnesty International, politically motivated. And according to every major press freedom organisation, the charges are also an attack on journalism itself, because they criminalise journalism and open the doors to imprisoning journalists for doing their jobs.

The urge of the authorities to silence and disappear Julian is born out of fear. We have the strength of our love and righteous conviction. Julian’s family will fight for his freedom and for his life, until he is free. Love over fear. Join us.”

You can make a donation to the legal defence fund of Julian Assange to help his fight against extradition by the Biden regime.
