

The Devastating Social and Environmental Impacts of The Keystone TransCanada Tar Sands Pipeline

The Keystone XL Video that TransCanada doesn't want you to see

By Josh Burstein

Global Research, June 23, 2014
Eco Watch 19 June 2024

Region: Canada, USA

Theme: Oil and Energy, Poverty & Social Inequality

The people pushing for approval of the Keystone XL pipeline argue that running this tar sands pipeline from Canada to the Gulf is a net positive for America, that it will create jobs and make our country more energy independent.

This argument could not be further from the truth. And you don't have to take our word for it.

We went to the source and talked to those who would be most directly affected by the pipeline's construction.

We spoke with members of the First Nations tribes, whose way of life is threatened by the tar sands extraction process.

We talked to American families who live along the pipeline's proposed path.

These are the communities that will be most adversely affected by this 1,179-mile long dirty-oil superhighway set for foreign oil markets.

More than anyone else, they understand what's at stake. Share the stories of these caretakers and warriors with the people you know and help make sure our lawmakers get the message.

The original source of this article is Eco Watch

Copyright © Josh Burstein, Eco Watch, 2014

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Josh Burstein

permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca