

The Causes of the Refugee Crisis: Mediterranean Refugee Death Toll in 2016 “Worst We Have Seen”

Introductory Note by Michel Chossudovsky

By United Nations

Global Research, October 28, 2016

UN News Centre 25 October 2016

Region: Europe, Middle East & North Africa

Theme: Poverty & Social Inequality, United Nations

Introduction

The refugee crisis is triggered by US-NATO led wars (Iraq, Afghanistan, Syria, Yemen, Libya...) “regime change”, “civil wars” and extreme poverty.

Poverty and despair are the result of the imposition of neoliberal economic reforms which have led to the demise of local industry and agriculture, the collapse of social services and state institutions.

The “civil wars” in the Sudan, Ethiopia, Somalia, Rwanda, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, among others are not “civil wars”. They are the result of armed insurrections financed and supported by foreign powers, which have resulted in the destruction of entire countries.

These so-called “civil wars” are an integral part of a US foreign policy agenda which consists in “militarizing” the African continent (under the helm of US Africa Command, AFRICOM).

Neoliberalism and Militarization go hand in hand: “Strong economic medicine” under the helm of the IMF and the World Bank has contributed since the early 1980s to destabilizing national governments and public institutions, while undermining Africa’s fundamental economic and social structures, transforming countries into “open territories”.

“Poverty is good for business”: The peasant economy and local manufacturing have been destroyed. An entire continent has been opened up to a process of economic pillage (and environmental destruction) by the West’s energy, mining and agribusiness conglomerates.

War and Globalization: The refugee crisis is triggered by the despair of millions of people fleeing their homeland, whose lives have been destroyed as a result of US led wars and civil wars coupled with devastating macro-economic reforms imposed by “The Washington Consensus”.

Michel Chossudovsky, Global Research Editor, October 28, 2016

* * *

With just two months left in 2016, and despite a substantial drop in the number of migrants and refugees attempting to cross the Mediterranean, the number of people losing their lives has witnessed a three-fold overall increase this year, and in one particular route by more than five-fold, the United Nations refugee agency said today.

“From one death for every 269 arrivals last year, in 2016 the likelihood of dying has spiralled to one in 88,” William Spindler, a spokesperson for the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), told journalists at the regular news briefing at the UN Office at Geneva (UNOG).

“On the Central Mediterranean route between Libya and Italy the likelihood of dying is even higher, at one death for every 47 arrivals,” he added.

The grim ratio for this route has worsened by more than 5.7-times.

“This is the worst we have seen,” expressed the UNHCR spokesperson.

According to the agency, at least 3,740 lives are reported lost between January and October 2016 – just short of the 3,771 deaths reported for the whole of 2015. This high loss of life comes despite a large overall fall this year in the number of people seeking to cross the Mediterranean to Europe.

Last year at least 1,015,078 people made the crossing. This year so far, crossings stand at 327,800.

“About half those who have crossed the Mediterranean so far this year have travelled from North Africa to Italy – a known more perilous route,” said Mr. Spindler explaining one of the causes behind the rise.

He further said that other causes include people smugglers using lower-quality “vessels” – no more than flimsy inflatable rafts that often do not last the journey; and the changing tactics of smugglers, with mass embarkations of thousands of people at a time.

Such changes could be used to lower detecting risks but also make the work of rescuers much more difficult, according to UNHCR.

Against this bleak backdrop, the UN agency urged all countries to do more, calling for, among others, greater and urgent attention to means such as enhanced resettlement and humanitarian admissions, family reunification, private sponsorship, and humanitarian, student and work visas for refugees.

UNHCR official also underscored that the high death rate is a reminder of the importance of continuing and robust search and rescue capacities – without which the fatality rates would almost certainly be higher.

The original source of this article is UN News Centre
Copyright © United Nations, UN News Centre, 2016

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: United Nations

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca