The transcript is translated from Romanian.

The oligarchs have turned Moldova into a feudal state with a corrupt system where part of the population is abroad and those who remain here are close hostages.

So begins a report published by Global Research [Centre for Research on Globalization], a research institution based in Canada.

The authors of the report [South Front] state that the government in Chisinau is dominated by the oligarchy headed by Vladimir Plahotniuc, which has sold the country's resources and has been involved in fraudulent financial transactions.

As for an eventual union with Romania, the oligarchs will never accept this idea because they do not want to lose power, while at the same time, Romanian nationalists using radical elements as a force which contribute to keeping Moldovans in fear.

The authors of the Global Research report, a research centre based in Canada, comments on the actions of former Prime Minister Iurie Leanca, in particular the fact that he allowed the National Bank to provide emergency loans to three banks: Banca de Economii, Banca Socială and Unibank.

The report also talks about Moldova's relations with Romania and the aspiration of people on both sides of the Prut [River] to meet.

It is not the first time our country is brought to the attention of the international community. Three days ago, in an interview published by The New York Times, Secretary General of the Council of Europe, Thorbjorn Jagland said that Moldova is a country on the brink, captured by oligarchs, and could become the next security crisis in Europe.

Jagland recommends the Moldovan authorities to make reforms and provide a corrupt-free society to Moldovans who despite all disappointments, hopes to have a bright future.

Oligarhii au transformat Republica Moldova într-un stat feudal, cu un sistem corupt în care o parte din populație este plecată peste hotare, iar cei rămași aici sunt aproape ostatici. Astfel începe un reportaj publicat de Global Research Centre, o instituție de cercetare din Canada. Autorii materialului califică guvernarea de la Chișinău drept una oligarhică, condusă de Vladimir Plahotniuc, o guvernare ce ar fi vândut resursele țării și ar fi delapidat banii europenilor în interes personal. Când privește o eventuală unire cu România, oligarhii nu vor accepta niciodată această idee pentru că nu vor să piardă puterea, deși, în același timp, folosesc naționaliștii români radicali ca pe o forță care să țină moldovenii în frică. Autorii analizei Global Research, un centru de cercetare din Canada, comentează și acțiunile fostului premier Iurie Leancă, în special faptul că acesta a permis Băncii Naționale să ofere credite de urgență celor trei bănci jefuite – Banca de Economii, Banca Socilă și Unibank.

În reportaj se vorbește și despre relația Republicii Moldova cu România și năzuința unor cetățeni de pe ambele maluri ale Prutului de a se reuni. Nu este pentru prima dată când țara noastră apare în atenția comunității internaționale. Acum trei zile, într-un interviu publicat de The New York Times, secretarul general al Consiliului Europei, Thorbjorn Jagland spunea că Moldova este un stat pe marginea prăpastiei, capturat de oligarhi, și riscă să devină următoarea criză de securitate a Europei. Jagland recomanda autorităților de la Chișinău să facă reforme și să ofere o țară fără corupție moldovenilor, care în ciuda tuturor dezamăgirilor, mai speră la un viitor luminos.
