

Tipperary's White Helmets Peace Prize: A Judas Kiss to the Antiwar Movement and Syria

Today marks another tragic day for the international antiwar and pro-peace movements, and a victory for ignorance.

The Tipperary International Peace Award ceremony was held today at the BallyKisteen Hotel, in Tipperary, Ireland. We're told that this year's award is "a testament to the enormous bravery and courage shown" by the Syria Civil Defence, also known as the White Helmets.

This is just the latest chapter in one of the biggest media and wartime frauds in modern history.

Far from saving lives in Syria, flying around between the US and Europe and collecting awards seems to be all that this group is doing. Last October, the White Helmets were also tipped to receive the Nobel Peace Prize, but apparently committee members backtracked at the last minute, instead giving the award to Colombian president Juan Manuel Santos.

It wasn't long after that, when the group scooped-up an Oscar Award for their Netflix documentary film. As one writer put it,

"Perhaps the only reason this group deserved to win an Oscar was for their acting skills — not their humanitarian efforts."

This latest award should be seen for what it is - another ritual ceremony by the Establishment to bolster the reputation of a failed construct, a carefully manufactured, pseudo "search and rescue" NGO with very visible links to extremists, terrorist organisations, and under the umbrella of covert western intelligence operations to destabilise the nation of Syria.

Martin Quinn, Secretary of the Tipperary Peace Convention (TPC), was interviewed about the controversy by Irish broadcaster RTE on August 11th.

Immediately, Quinn wastes no time, reading off of a pre-approved Q & A script:

"The White Helmets selection is a testament to the enormous bravery and courage shown by ordinary Syrians, who have saved upwards of 100,000 people, and whose 192 volunteers have 'paid the ultimate price with their lives.' You know these volunteers emerged from the dust that hangs over the rubble of cities like Aleppo, double-timing it into one of the most dangerous places on earth, to do what the rest of the world can't do, and that is to save Syrian lives."

We've heard all this before. Perhaps some of this is true, perhaps they were present in these areas, but who are these White Helmets?

The Irish journalist pressed Quinn on some of these points, and his reaction was simply to avoid answering any of her questions. The exchange went as follows:

RTE to Martin Quinn: "You said there that they have saved 100,000 lives during the Syrian War. How are you able to verify that? the White Helmets have saved 100,000 lives?"

MQ: "Well... that's from the White Helmets themselves, that's from their own figures to us... uhh, that they've saved over 100,000 lives. So, we're going on that information."

RTE. "You take that at face value?"

MQ: "We do indeed, yes."

So, according to Quinn, it must be true because the White Helmets said so, and after all, why would any group funded and equipped by the US, UK and NATO member state governments... lie?

On the claim of 100,000 lives saved, this would work out to roughly 70 lives saved per day, every day, since the White Helmets were founded in late 2013. You would think after racking up a few hundred million dollars from the west that the White Helmets could manage to keep basic records, but apparently not. That would be too much to ask for a cool $200 million.

The reality is this: at no point have the White Helmets ever presented any documentation detailing the names and addresses of these alleged victims, much less the exact locations, times and basic medical accident reports - all of which would help to verify their unbelievable numbers. If they had, then it would be a fairly straightforward exercise to cross reference this data with air sorties and other documented reports of military fire, rebel shelling and air strikes since late 2013. Why is it that no such information exists? Is it because they don't have the resources to perform basic admin protocols? Is it because the White Helmets are illiterate and can't read or write? The answer should be obvious: it's because the White Helmets have not saved 100,000 lives. Instead they have simply invented their numbers in order to bolster their marketing and lucrative fundraising activity, as well as staging some of their alleged "rescue videos."

Tipperary Peace leader Martin Quinn is then pressed by RTE to clarify the many reports of White Helmets taking part in summary executions, and essentially acting as a 'mop-up' crew for US Coalition and Gulf state-backed terrorist and extremist brigades in East Aleppo and Idlib, such as Nusra Front. Here Quinn continues to evade direct questioning on the matter:

RTE: "You know that they have often been accused by Assad supporters as aiding the rebel fighters in the war in Syria. Did you examine that?"

Quinn: "We did, and uhh... it should be said firstly that the Syrian Civil Defense is officially an impartial humanitarian NGO, with no affiliation to any political or military actor, and has verifiable international funding from the reputable May Day Rescue organisation..."

First, the White Helmets base of operations, media production unit and training facility is in Turkey, not in Syria. Regarding Mayday Rescue, that organisation was set-up in part by former British military intelligence officer, James Le Mesurier - the creator of the White Helmets (yes, that's right, it's a British creation), and acts as a Netherlands-based funding & cash transferral vehicle for White Helmet sponsors. Is all that money really being spent on helmets and jump suits? So far, no audited accounts have been forthcoming from either the donor governments, or from Mayday, and no one is really holding their breath either.

As far as Quinn's claim that the White Helmets have 'no affiliation to any political or military actors' - this is either a naive misstep, or it is a bald-faced lie.

Let's start with the 'NGO's' primary financiers - the UK, US, the EU and its member states (including Ireland). Are these governments not political? Have they not been at the forefront of calls for regime change (overthrowing the government) in Syria? Have they not all conspired openly together to pass brutal economic sanctions against Syria which have devastated the Syrian economy, causing mass unemployment, hyper-inflation, contributing to increased black markets, and starving the poorest sectors of society, thus fueling the internal and external refugee crisis, and in effect - extending the life of the conflict? Have these western governments not spent billions of taxpayers' money supplying weapons, cash, supplies, training and military air support for the "moderate rebel" terrorist factions that have infested and destabilised Syria since 2011?

In addition to this, I can testify personally that upon visiting many of the White Helmets centers in formerly Nusra Front-occupied East Aleppo, one would often see both the Free Syrian Army and ISIS flags prominently displayed there. Contrary to western propaganda, the Free Syrian Army was not moderate', they were hardcore terrorists and were responsible for some of the most violent attacks on civilians and civil infrastructure during this long war.

Reporter Patrick Henningsen in the courtyard of a children's school which was commandeered by the White Helmets and turned in a 'training center'. Behind him, you can clearly see the Free Syrian Army flag and the White Helmets brand displayed together. It should also be noted that the adjacent school building next to the White Helmets barracks was occupied by terrorist brigade Jabhat al Nusra and used as a military facility in Sakhour, East Aleppo (Photo: Patrick Henningsen, May 2017).

Obviously, Quinn hasn't done any independent research on the White Helmets. If he had, he would have known that their leader Raed Saleh, was previously denied entry to the US because of 'extremists links.' A similar incident also took place when White Helmet's staff photographer Khaled Khateeb was denied entry to the US, to attend the Oscars ceremony.

If Quinn had bothered to research for himself, he would have also known that Saleh's partner, Mustafa al-Haj Yussef, leader of the White Helmets centre in the Al Nusra-occupied town of Khan Shaykhun, Idlib, has been seen in the company of armed militants, and he had also advocated attacking any Syrian civilians who dared go out in Damascus and vote in the 2014 elections. Vile behavior to some, but for some reason, it's worthy of a peace prize in Tipperary this year.

In addition to this, numerous independent journalists and humanitarians have documented the fact that the White Helmets share facilities with Al Nusra terrorists, particularly in East Aleppo – see some of this documented evidence here.

Here's the important part: with just a little bit of internet searching, anyone can view this massive photo cache of over 50 separate images of White Helmets members armed, and holding dual roles as Al Nusra, Nour al Din al-Zinki and Arar al Sham terrorist fighters, as well as links to many other terrorist groups.

This takes us back to one of Quinn's canned PR talking points. When asked by the RTE host about the extremist pedigree of the White Helmets, this is how he responded...

Quinn: "So in relation to the negativity associated with the White Helmets, our information which we believe to be most credible, is that it's driven by a mix of largely by unsubstantiated conspiracy theories propagated by the 'Assad-based media', and a plethora of social and other online media that can be seen to be directed by Russia."

Again, Quinn is reading off the script, but it's a bad one. Unable to address the accusations, he opts-out, going for the Russian conspiracy theory, and smearing any media outlet whose findings run contrary to his pre-set talking points. Can Mr. Quinn back up his libelous claims? His statement explicitly infers that this website – which effectively expanded the investigation into the White Helmets story in 2015, which had first been exposed by Cory Morningstar in 2014 and American and British editors of this website, Patrick Henningsen and Vanessa Beeley, who have built up an impressive library of fact-based evidence against the White Helmets, combined with Canadian journalist Eva Bartlett, or American activist Rick Sterling and many other independent media outlets – are being directed by Assad and the Russian government? What Quinn is engaging in here is pure defamation – to conceal the facts surrounding the White Helmets.

Quinn should know how my colleague and journalist Vanessa Beeley, who while visiting the REAL Syria Civil Defense (yes, the real civil defense, not the fake White Helmet version) last month in Ein Tarma, Jobar, a suburb of Damascus, found herself and others under live fire attack by Al Nusra Front militants. During that attack, 7 Syrian soldiers from the 4th Division were killed by Western and Gulf-backed terrorists. See some of that video footage here. This reality I have just shared with you, where the REAL Syria Civil Defense is being targeted by terrorists armed by the west and their allies – is the inverse of Quinn's Hollywood-fantasy Syrian narrative.

What's amazing is how people like Quinn still refer to the western-created and western-funded White Helmets as "Syria's Civil Defense." Here is where Quinn and the Tipperary Peace Prize are helping to propagate state-of-the-art war propaganda. The name "Syria's Civil Defense" implies that the White Helmets are the actual 'Civil Defense' of Syria. They are not. It also infers that this so-called 'Civil Defense' is legitimate and is being targeted by its own Syrian government, in partnership with the evil Russians. That's a double lie. Their 'Civil Defense' moniker was cynically stolen for a reason: to directly undermine actual civil institutions in Syria, like the REAL Syria Civil Defense who were established in 1953. Unlike the fabricated western-backed construct which this virtue signalling Irish peace organisation is presently showering with accolades this week in Tipperary - the REAL Syria Civil Defense is officially recognised by the ICDO in Geneva. Conversely, the ICDO does not recognise the White Helmets, for obvious reasons - but unfortunately, not obvious enough for the naive Tipperary Peace Prize.

By framing any dissent to the official US-UK line on the White Helmets as a “conspiracy theory,” Quinn and the Tipperary Peace Convention are also implying that people like premier peace activist and award-winning journalist and filmmaker, John Pilger, are conspiracy theorists and somehow part of an ‘Assad-based’ media complex. That’s outrageous, but that’s exactly what’s being attempted here.

One has to ask, what exactly are Quinn’s qualifications for evaluating the quality and veracity of hundreds of journalists’ work exposing the White Helmets?

Quinn goes on coloring his own imaginary world stating,

“Very importantly there have been no verifiable links drawn between the White Helmets and Islamic fundamentalist groups. More the opposite, in that they act as impediment to radicalisation and recruitment for such organisations...”

That’s a stretch. From my travels inside of Syria, I can tell you that White Helmets are not recognised by the Syrian people as any legitimate ‘civil defense.’ This might come as a shock to those who reside in the imaginary world constructed by CNN, NBC, The Guardian, Democracy Now!, The Intercept, and Code Pink and every other major media outlet who have been promoting the White Helmets since 2013. In fact, in dozens of interviews with residents in liberated East Aleppo, most residents had never heard of the group. Those that have, had many stories to tell us about “Nusra Front’s Civil Defense”.

This boy told us how the White Helmets operated with Nusra Front in Bab Al Nairab, East Aleppo:

When asking residents of Damascus, no one had ever heard of them them. The same in Homs. It seems as if the White Helmets only ever existed for two audiences: firstly, for a western, US-European audience, and secondly, for a Gulf audience. The purpose of the first is obvious - the White Helmets exist to give a humanitarian face to the “moderate rebels” (another fake construct created by the west) and to demonise the Syrian and Russian government forces who, unlike the US, UK and its partners, are actually engaged in and winning, the fight against terrorist groups in Syria.

The second reason is far more insidious however. White Helmet propaganda was also played on heavy rotation on hundreds of Gulf state-funded satellite channels and online via social media - which served another purpose: to help recruit extremist fighters. This point is evidenced by numerous interviews of extremists from Europe to Middle East, to Central Asia, many of whom have given similar testimonies on record, with a similar remark, ‘I watch the suffering on TV and the brutality of the regime, and I had to act, I had to go to Syria.’ In this way, the White Helmets were an important part of extremist recruitment and in attracting the international brigades to Syria.

RTE: "They themselves have been forced to publicly acknowledge major breaches of their own stated goals, most recently a few months ago in May when members of the White Helmets were seen overseeing the execution of a man in a rebel-held area.."

Completely dodging the question, Quinn answers: "Yes, well, uhh... our information, as I said, which we believe is the most credible, is... is that the White Helmets are very worthy of receiving the Tipperary International Peace Prize..."

RTE: "But where do you get your information from Martin? As you know, the situation in Syria is a full-on conflict... with propaganda being waged on both sides."

MQ: "Yes...we have consulted at Government level... and we have also engaged with the security analysts... who gave us the kind of information, that we can make a decision on the award."

Again, like a good politician, here Quinn has completely dodged a direct question - which is an admission of ignorance, followed by immediate evasive manoeuvre (how many times have we seen politicians or corporate criminals use this exact same technique when cornered in an interview).

Here Quinn gives no specifics, like CNN, he just tells us he has 'sources', apparently from UK government - who created and are funding the group he's giving his award to. But it gets worse...

RTE: "But how do you square the White Helmets own acknowledgement that some of their members have aided in the execution and the burial of pro-Assad forces?”

MQ: “Well I haven’t seen that acknowledgement... so I have to say, (stutters again) and, and uhh ... I am aware there are a lot of conspiracy theories... in relation to the White Helmets.”

This is nothing new. For people who see themselves as gatekeepers for the establishment, dedicated to protecting the official line, rather than reading and figuring out anything for themselves, or investigating any serious accusations against the entities they are advocating on behalf of, it’s much easier to slap the label of ‘conspiracy theory’ on a credible inquiry, thus absolving their conscience, along with any responsibility, and finally dispensing with any accountability.

As Quinn stumbles through the interview, it’s pretty clear that he doesn’t seem to know what he is talking about. Not one challenging question answered, as he doggedly stuck to the UK Foreign Office public relations script.

(Listen to the full RTE Quinn interview here)

The other thing is that Quinn refers to the White Helmets as “ordinary Syrians”, who are, as the New Internationalist described them, “rushing towards death.” It’s a nice fairy tale. The White Helmets are anything but ordinary, however, as they only operate in terrorist-held areas in Syria, occupied by force of arms by Jabhat al Nusra (and all their other rebranding names and affiliates) and ISIS.

In East Aleppo in 2012, most of the residents fled to government-held West Aleppo and to the coastal regions like Latakia, in order to escape living under Sharia street courts and terrorist rule. The fighting age males who remained were quickly co-opted by western-backed terrorists who controlled those areas. Western media and pro-interventionists like Quinn might prefer to call those ‘rebel-held’ areas, but I have actually traveled to Syria, to these various areas, and seen ‘the rebels’ and the damage they have inflicted on the populations who they were lording over for four and a half years in East Aleppo.

These were internationally recognized terrorists, and they were brutal. To state otherwise and claim that it’s a ‘matter of opinion’ (eg. “I have a right to my opinion to call them rebels”) is an intellectual fraud, and a furtherance of western war propaganda. Sadly, and perhaps unknowingly, this is exactly what Quinn and TPC are doing. My message to them is simple: go and ask the Syrian people – they will tell you who these men were, and unlike the western media and politicians, people in Syria don’t use the word ‘rebel’ when describing armed Islamist militants. To dismiss these facts out of hand, and claim that ‘we haven’t had time to look at those claims,’ or to accuse independent journalists of peddling “conspiracy theories” about the White Helmets without even looking at the material, much less reporting any of the contents therein, is derelict on the part of Quinn and TPC.

What Quinn is not telling RTE or the public, is that the White Helmets are being bankrolled by our governments; specifically by the US State Department ($23 million through USAID, a known CIA front NGO, and that’s not a conspiracy theory), and the British Foreign Office (over $80 million), and tens of millions more from EU and NATO member states, and many millions more from opaque crowdfunding. What’s important here, and what should be important for Quinn and the TPC, is that all of these financial stakeholders have a stated vested interest in “regime change” in Syria.

So, while the US, UK, Netherlands, Germany and others are paying for this NGO construct, the White Helmets are in turn, producing films which are then used to reinforce and promote these investor nations’ collective foreign policy directives through mainstream media and various third sector foundations and charities. The White Helmet ‘rescue films,’ along with all of the White Helmets’ incredible claims, are then accepted at face value by Quinn, the TPC and the western corporate media such as CNN and affiliated state-run media outlets (BBC, Channel 4) – with no questions asked. None. This is an incredible thing in itself: that these parties are so eager to appropriate any artefact which fulfills their pre-fabricated narrative: ‘The rebels are a natural outgrowth of a peaceful Arab Spring uprising in 2011, and the Assad regime is brutalising its own people, and the White Helmets are an organic response to this injustice.’ It is that universal lie which underpins the entire western establishment narrative, symbolised by the White Helmets.

On Tipperary’s website, the image they used is one of a staged rescue which features a female ‘white helmet’ (image, left) which, for anyone who is in Syria or has been on the ground there, will tell you is a complete joke. There are no genuinely, operational female ‘white helmets’, just as there are no Syrian minority community members of Le Mesurier’s merry band of brothers. No, the White Helmet operatives in the terrorist “field” are exclusively male, and Islamist extremists. That’s evidenced by numerous reports and hundreds of videos, photos and the Islamist paraphernalia spread throughout their material. I realise this might be getting too detailed for the Tipperary Peace committee, but it’s true, and not a conspiracy theory as Quinn would claim.

The real conspiracy theory here is that of the White Helmets official line robotically parroted by Quinn, that they are an “impartial humanitarian NGO, with no affiliation to any political or military actor.” That is pure fiction.

At every step of the way, the White Helmets have been used to prop-up the US-NATO-GCC artificial narrative, serving to undermine the Syrian government internationally and its legitimate allies in the conflict, Russia, Iran and Lebanon’s Hezbollah.

Additionally, according to Martin Quinn, also “in the running” this year was celebrity lawyer Amal Clooney, a member of the Council of Foreign Relations (along with a number of known war criminals including Dick Cheney, and Hillary Clinton who was a leading architect of both the Libyan and Syrian conflicts), and the late Martin McGuinness. Maybe not coincidentally, Amal Clooney’s husband, George Clooney, is said to be producing a big budget Hollywood blockbuster film about... the White Helmets. So the gravy train of fakery just keeps going.

Interestingly, in 2015, Tipperary awarded their prize to John Kerry, a man who stood there and lied to the UN and world while serving as Secretary of State, claiming he had “enormous amounts of evidence” that ‘Russian-backed rebels’ in eastern Ukraine were responsible for the downing of MH17 in July 2014. History now shows that Kerry was lying, and we’re still waiting for his ‘evidence’. The implications of Kerry’s lies are now evident: his comments helped to set-off a new wave of EU and US sanctions against Russia, effectively placing East-West relations back into another deep freeze, a resumption of the Cold War no less.

Tipperary could not have given the prize to a more undeserving recipient than Kerry. After receiving the award in 2015, Kerry went on to continue promulgating lies which increased military tensions between the US-led coalition and Russia. Last fall, Kerry, along with his underling Samantha Power, pushed the fabricated claim that Russian and Syrian air forces attacked a UN aid convoy. No evidence was ever produced to back this claim, but the ones who provided the dodgy video footage used to frame Russia and Syria? Yes, that's right: the White Helmets. If only it ended there...

Regarding events at the UN last September, Southfront also reported:

"A leaked audio of US Secretary of State John Kerry's meeting with members of the Syrian opposition at the Dutch Mission of the UN on September 22. The audio also is an evidence of the fact that mainstream media colluded with the Obama's administration in order to push the narrative for regime change in Syria, hiding the truth about arming and funding ISIS by the US, as it exposed a 35 minute conversation that was omitted by CNN."

Funding and arming terrorists in order to overthrow Assad? Perhaps these details are just too much, and too complicated for Tipperary's celebrity glad-handers. But these are the facts.

Other recipients of this apparently prestigious award include such luminaries as Rudy Giuliani and Bill Clinton. No, it's true.

For some reason, Tipperary didn't get the memo that all of us Americans got years ago, which is that Giuliani is a caustic warmonger.

"If you look at Giuliani's statements, you will find he has advocated bombing Iran, he has advocated for intervention, to my knowledge he's never admitted the Iraq war was a mistake," said US Senator Rand Paul earlier this year.

By trading on his happenstance relationship to the 9/11 tragedy, "Mr 9/11" Giuliani has managed to fashion himself into one of the world's most highly paid international jet-set security consultants, and has amassed a $45 million fortune as a result.

It's bizarre to say the least, that Tipperary did not see what many of us in America have known for years - that Rudy Giuliani has an earned reputation as a foreign policy war hawk, who even remarked in public last fall that when it comes to war "anything's legal."

In addition to this, for years now, Giuliani (along with a number of other corrupt US politicians) has been on the event speakers' payroll of the US-backed, exiled Iranian 'freedom fighter' terrorist group, the Mojahedin-e Khalq, or MEK (MKO).

And the Tipperary Peace Convention gave this man an international prize? Farcical - and it also should serve as a deep insult to all antiwar activists worldwide.

As for Bill Clinton, his record speaks for itself. History shows that this was a man who was certainly impeached for the wrong crimes. American journalist David Harten remarked in 2001:

"The day before the House impeachment vote, Clinton bombed Iraq, delaying the impeachment vote. He continued the bombing throughout all the days of the impeachment vote. Only an hour or two after the House impeachment vote ended, Clinton ended the bombing, saying, "We have achieved our objectives." Of course, because the objective was to delay and distract from the impeachment vote! In all other respects, the bombing hurt U.S. and international interests."

It was a massacre, and a war crime. One of many too. The same could be said for Clinton's role in mounting an international disinformation campaign about "genocide" by Serbian forces which was then used to justify the illegal bombing of Yugoslavia in 1999 and the arming of imported Mujahedin terrorists in Bosnia and Kosovo - a blueprint for future operations in Syria.

These criminals are considered worthy recipients of the Tipperary Peace Prize.

I expect Martin Quinn and his committee may also want to nominate another big name, Madeleine Albright, who when asked about the US government's economic sanctions siege of Iraq which led to the deaths of some 500,000 Iraqi children and many others, simply replied,

"I think this is a very hard choice. But the price, we think, is worth it."

It seems that far from promoting serious antiwar icons and genuine champions of peace, the Tipperary International Peace Prize is more akin to a vehicle for sucking-up to celebrity and popular establishment names. This gives the organisation the opportunity to surf on the back of celebrity gravitas, in an attempt to achieve elevated status in the NGO world.

It's ironic that this Irish peace organisation was originally founded in order to help counteract the negative war-like connotations associated with their town because of the famous war song, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." We're told that the founding committee of the Tipperary Peace Convention was created to ensure their town should be known for peace. Instead, what we see now is a group which is helping to promote some of the biggest war-mongers and enablers of war in the world, while slandering and defaming independent peace activists and journalists publicly, as Mr Quinn has just done.

I have spent most of my adult life committed to campaigning for peace internationally, but I would not be welcome at this year's Tipperary Peace Convention, because I won't adhere to a blatantly false narrative, invented by my own government in order to overthrow another nation state.

By now, Tipperary International Peace Prize is a long, long way from its stated mission. It has become an accomplice to the global war machine, rather than a force against it.

For Ireland and for the international peace movement, the award given to the White Helmets this afternoon is not a victory for peace, but rather a victory for ignorance and corruption.

This week also marked the defeat of ISIS at Der Ezzor in eastern Syria. ISIS has been routed, just like Nusra Front, and every other western and gulf-backed terrorist group in Syria who have nurtured the White Helmets since their formation in 2013. Despite blowing billions of dollars in taxpayer funds, the Western countries have now lost the war Syria, and as each day passes, more western lies are exposed, and the truth continues to be revealed.

Unfortunately, today Tipperary is on the wrong side of history.
