Protests against Netanyahu’s legal reform, which annulled the separation of powers, would have had as a side effect the appearance of fissures in the areas of Israeli Defense and Intelligence, due to the refusal of a significant number of reservists to join vital posts for the Israeli Defense, many of them grouped in the “Brothers and Sisters in Arms” block.

Taking advantage of the alleged security holes in the Israeli Defense caused by the schism between the reservists and Netanyahu, the armed wing of the Islamist group Hamas, launched the largest military offensive since 2007 with the infiltration of tens of its members in Israeli localities and the launching of thousands of projectiles against wide areas, including Tel Aviv and Jerusalem with the provisional result of about 1500 Israeli victims.

Netanyahu of the resounding Israeli security failure to belittle Egyptian information. Thus, according to Egyptian sources, 10 days earlier they allegedly warned Netanyahu that Hamas was preparing a major offensive that ended with about 1500 Israeli victims and according to a survey by The Jerusalem Post, 80% of the respondents say that “the Government is mainly responsible for the infiltration of Palestinian militias” and 56% think that “Netanyahu should resign at the end of the current war.”

But the second Palestinian Nakba will be inevitable if the United States does not intervene and forces the Netanyahu government to stop the asymmetric punishment of the civilian population of the Gaza Strip in the form of continuous bombings and the cut in the supply of electricity and water to the Gazan population.

Such asymmetrical punishment would have triggered a wave of global support for the people of Gaza, coupled with the growing disaffection of Israeli society towards Netanyahu, could lead to the resignation of his Government and the subsequent convocation of new elections to facilitate the formation of a new Israeli Salvation Government whose primary task will be to try to re-edit the Oslo Accords that allow the peaceful coexistence of Two peoples in Two States.
