

US Treasury schedules record $123 bln bond auction week

By Burton Frierson

Global Research, October 27, 2009

Reuters 22 October 2009

Region: USA

Theme: Global Economy

NEW YORK, Oct 22 (Reuters) - The U.S. government on Thursday announced a record volume of $123 billion worth of bond auctions next week, but there was little reaction in financial markets even though the amount of supply came at the high end of analysts' expectations.

The figure beats the previous record of $115 billion set in July and includes two-, five- and seven-year notes in tandem with an offering of previously issued five-year Treasury Inflation Protected Securities.

Analysts had expected next week's total coupon supply to come in at $121 billion to $122 billion.

"I thought it was on the heavy side but the supply for the most part has been getting taken down just because there is a lot of cash out there looking for a safe home," said Mary Ann Hurley, vice president of fixed-income trading at D.A. Davidson & Co. in Seattle.

"I think there should be some concession before the auction. No matter how you slice it even if it came in as expected it still would be a lot of supply to take down in four days."

Upside surprises came in a slightly larger-than-expected seven-year note sale of $31 billion and a chunkier TIPS offering of $7 billion.

The government will also sell $44 billion of two-year notes, and $41 billion worth of five-year notes.

U.S. Treasury debt prices took the announcement in stride, remaining steady at lower levels on the day US10YT=RR.

Investors have kept a close eye on U.S. debt auctions this year in light of the government's burgeoning budget deficit. During a brief period in May some questioned the longevity of the United States' prized AAA rating.

The U.S. budget deficit hit a record $1.4 trillion in the fiscal year that ended on Sept. 30 as the deep recession and a series of bank rescues cut a gaping hole in public finances.

In terms of the economy, the budgetary shortfall amounted to a massive 10 percent of total U.S. economic output, the most for any budget shortfall since World War Two, and the White House has forecast deficits of more than $1 trillion through fiscal 2011.

The original source of this article is Reuters
Copyright © Burton Frierson, Reuters, 2009

Comment on Global Research Articles on our Facebook page

Become a Member of Global Research

Articles by: Burton Frierson

Disclaimer: The contents of this article are of sole responsibility of the author(s). The Centre for Research on Globalization will not be responsible for any inaccurate or incorrect statement in this article. The Centre of Research on Globalization grants permission to cross-post Global Research articles on community internet sites as long the source and copyright are acknowledged together with a hyperlink to the original Global Research article. For publication of Global Research articles in print or other forms including commercial internet sites, contact: publications@globalresearch.ca www.globalresearch.ca contains copyrighted material the use of which has not always been specifically authorized by the copyright owner. We are making such material available to our readers under the provisions of "fair use" in an effort to advance a better understanding of political, economic and social issues. The material on this site is distributed without profit to those who have expressed a prior interest in receiving it for research and educational purposes. If you wish to use copyrighted material for purposes other than "fair use" you must request permission from the copyright owner.

For media inquiries: publications@globalresearch.ca