Region: Middle East & North Africa, USA

Theme: Terrorism, US NATO War Agenda

In-depth Report: SYRIA

NATO member Turkey was busted buying huge quantities of oil from ISIS (its main source of funding), and bombing ISIS' main on-the-ground enemy - Kurdish soldiers - using its air force. Many also say that Turkey has long been directly supporting ISIS.

The Israeli air force has bombed near the Syrian capital of Damascus, and attacked agricultural facilities and warehouses (the Syrian government is the other main opponent of ISIS in Syria besides the Kurds). The Israeli military recently admitted supporting Syrian jihadis. And see this.

Mainstream U.S. writers such as Thomas Friedman have called for America to support ISIS.

Republican Senator Ted Cruz opposed U.S. military intervention in Syria, saying the U.S. military shouldn't be "Al Qaeda's air force." Similarly, former Democratic Congressman Dennis Kucinich said that striking Syria would turn the United States military into "al-Qaeda's air force." (ISIS is just a re-branded name for Al Qaeda).

"So what, we're about to become Al Qaeda's air force now?" Kucinich said. "This is a very, very serious matter that has broad implications internationally. And to try to minimize it by saying we're just going to have a 'targeted strike' — that's an act of war. It's not anything to be trifled with." (2013 Interview)

Indeed, NBC News, the Wall Street Journal, CNN and others report that the U.S. has already committed to provide air power to support Muslim jihadis in Syria.

So Turkey, Israel and the U.S. are all now acting as ISIS' air force in order to oust the Syrian government ... again.
